Man must eat to live. One of the most important facts about man during his life on earth has been to make certain that he has enough to eat when he needs it. Early man had little choice in what he ate. He ate what he could find. He did not have any power to control his food supply. when he ate all the food in one place, he had to move to another place to find enough to eat. If there was no rain, or if weather was too hot or cold, he could have little or no food. Man's life changed when he learned how to prepare his food.
